Establishing a New Era of Fine Craftsmanship

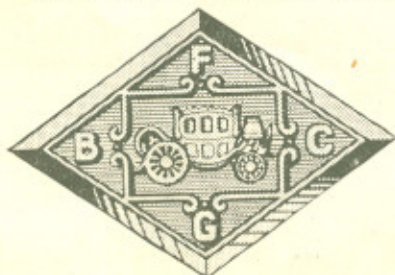

THROUGHOUT the Dominion—in lonely hamlet and mighty city—Canadian boys are engaged in carrying on the traditions of the master craftsmen of history. As members of the Fisher Body Craftsman's Guild, they are in truth establishing a new era of fine craftsmanship!

These boys are each building by hand, according to plans supplied by the Guild, a miniature model Napoleonic coach. The test is one which requires intense concentration and cheerful perseverance. It is calculated to bring out the best talents of every boy by training him to produce finer and more enduring things, fitting him for a higher place in industry.

The reward will be $17,000, comprising eight scholarships ranging in value from $500 to $5,000. These will go to the eight boys whose model coaches, in the opinions of the judges, most nearly approach the ideals set down by the Guild.

Why not plan now to join the Fisher Body Craftsman's Guild? Full particulars may be obtained from the Canadian Section of the Guild—at Oshawa, Ontario.

THE CHIEF SCOUT LORD BADEN-POWELL of GILWELL

By

The Chief Executive Commissioner

Brother Scouts:

Let me tell you the story of "The richest man in the World". People have said, and I believe it is true, that Lord Baden-Powell, Chief Scout of all the world, is very rich. He is not rich in money, in fact I don't think he worries very much about money, but his life has been exceedingly rich in all those things which money can buy and many which it cannot. Wouldn't you like to be able to say that you had travelled in, hunted in and had been exploring in almost every country in the world and at the same time had lived a healthy, happy and useful life, making thousands of friends everywhere?

Now I am going to tell you some things you may not know about the Chief Scout. He was born in London, England, 77 years ago on George Washington's birthday, February 22nd. His whole name is: Robert Stephenson Smyth Baden-Powell.

When he was a little boy they had a party at his house one evening, after he had been sent to bed. The noise below wakened him and slipping out of bed in his nightgown, he toddled down stairs determined to see what was going on. He was discovered first by a man named Thackeray, the famous author, who stopped him, talked to him and offered him a whole shilling if he would go back to bed. The Chief Scout says he returned to bed and still has that shilling and is very proud of it.

He was always very fond of his mother and says: "The whole secret of my getting on lay with my mother. How that wonderful woman managed to bring us all up . . . and how she did not kill herself with anxiety and strain, I do not understand." There were ten children; Robert, or "Robin", as his wife calls him—was the sixth son and when he was three years old his father died and his poor mother had to feed, clothe and educate the children. The Chief says, "It was her influence that guided me through life more than any precepts or discipline that I may have learned at school."

He says himself that when he went to school he wasn't very clever and even fell asleep occasionally in class. Of course, we take his remark about not being clever with a grain of salt. One thing is true, and that is he was not always as obedient in school as he might have been and when he could get the opportunity he would steal out and run to the woods where he set snares for rabbits. He says he didn't catch many, but when he did he used to skin them and cook them over a small fire. Sometimes the Masters would come hunting for him and in that case he had a trick that always worked. He would scramble up a tree into the high branches and lie very still. None of them ever thought of looking up, and he didn't get caught. The school he went to was the famous Charterhouse and when he graduated from there he endeavoured to get into Oxford University, but failed. He then tried an examination for a Commission in the Army and was surprised to learn that he had come second out of seven hundred candidates.

Of course, it would be quite impossible for me to tell all about him in the space allowed me in this catalogue, so I will just relate a few interesting episodes in his life and write of some of the things he liked best.

PLAY ACTING—He was very fond of dressing up and at Charterhouse often took part in plays. With this start he soon developed a remarkable ability in disguising himself, resulting in many mirth-provoking incidents.

On one occasion, in India, a regimental concert was in progress when he walked a General and proceeded up the aisle, calling to the men loudly to sit down, at which, of course, seeing their important visitor, they naturally stood up. Colonel Baker Russell, sitting in the front row, rose hurriedly, came forward to greet his unexpected guest and led him to his seat. The General proved to be a jolly old chap and, before sitting down, turned to the crowd and said that he was ready to join in the fun and would even go on the stage and sing them a song if they wished. There was a roar of approval and up to the stage he went and was half-way through the song called "The Major General" before the Colonel discovered that it was Lieutenant Baden-Powell dressed up. In some way or other he had borrowed a General's uniform from a neighbouring regiment, knowing that his Colonel had not yet met him.

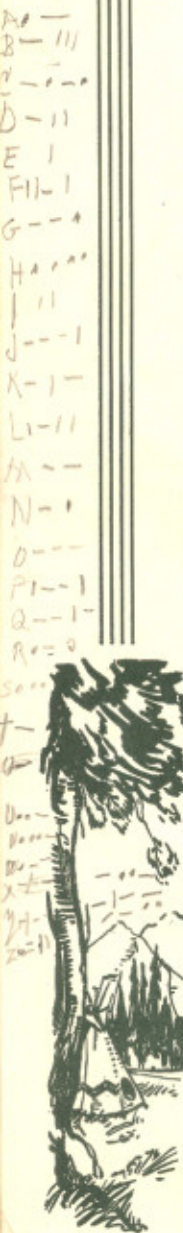

Some times in India sickness would break out in the regiment, maybe cholera or typhoid, and the men would become down-hearted and frightened. It was then that B.P. would organize a play and get them interested, so they would forget their troubles. He says: "Happifying others is as good a sport as any in life, especially at times when cholera or typhoid is rife and fear of death is among the men."

MUSIC—What fun he has had with his music. He began by learning to play as many different kinds of instrument as possible and at school was in the orchestra. He was always writing home asking for more music, especially Gilbert and Sullivan's comic operas.

DRAWING—One does not know the Chief very long without realizing that for him to live is to draw. He can draw two pictures at the same time, one with each hand. Sometimes when he is chairman of a meeting he will be making pictures of the people who are speaking and after the meeting there is always a rush to the head table by those who want to get the pictures. He claims that sketching takes one out into the country where it is quiet and shows him the beauties and wonders that God has set out for our enjoyment.

SPYING—His ability to disguise himself proved of great service to him when it fell to his lot to act as a spy in foreign countries. In Turkey, on one occasion, he spent most of a dark night crawling up a mountain. He wanted to see a certain fort and to be able to tell where it was. Shortly after the sun came up he was discovered, but he quickly pulled out his paints and was busy making a water-colour picture of the mountains and the sunrise when the officer came up. B.P. told him of the terrible climb he had had to get his picture and the officer was most kind and even showed him some important maps, in order to make his return journey easy.

On another occasion he wanted to examine a certain power house, but as he came near it and was about to enter the gates, he was chased by a policeman. He ran for all he was worth around a building and up a ladder to the roof. By this time two policemen were chasing him, but they never thought of looking up. After the Chief had had a good look around and had made some measurements, so he could tell where the power house was, he watched his chance and sliding down a pole got away before the policemen saw him again.

On another occasion, in Russia, at night while walking along the road, he made the mistake of lowering his head when the Czar's carriage went by. He did not want the lights of the carriage to show his face, but this aroused suspicion and he was quickly arrested and locked up in a hotel. However, he managed to escape and hurried down to the wharf where he got aboard an English vessel.

I have heard Baden-Powell tell, with some amusement, of the time he was caught and shot as a spy during the Great War. A man named Waterbury said he saw the execution with his own eyes while in the Tower of London. He even told the last words B.P. said before the fatal shots were fired. To make the incident even more humorous, an American newspaper cabled Baden-Powell to learn if it were true.

HIS LOVE OF SPORT—Baden-Powell has been a sportsman in the truest sense of the word. He calls life a great game and claims that team games, such as football, hockey, polo, and the like promote discipline in obedience to the rules and to the Captain, and that they develop the British ideal of fair play, and playing with all one's might for one's side and not for selfish glory.

BOATMANSHIP—As a small boy he and his brothers secured a sailing boat and used it to sail up and down the coasts of England, hoping that some day they would be able to save a ship in distress and make themselves rich by collecting salvage money. Of course, they never got any money, but he claims the training in boatmanship was excellent and taught him to face danger without becoming panic-stricken.

FISHING—Oh, where hasn't the Chief fished? In England, Scotland, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and many other countries. One Sunday morning in Wales, while the guest of Lord Glanusk, he strolled down to the boathouse, just before going to Church. He saw a fishing rod hanging on the wall and yielded to the temptation to cast a fly into the water nearby. Much to his surprise a twenty-five pounder grabbed the hook and proceeded to pull him into the stream. His struggles attracted the attention of passersby and soon quite a crowd collected watching him as he fought with the fish. A few days later he got a message from a religious conference written in Welsh and English, saying that no boy or girl of their congregation would be allowed to join the Boy Scouts or the Girl Guides, since their Leader fished on the Sabbath Day. Moral, don't go fishing on Sunday.

SHOOTING—He loves to shoot, but only to get food to eat. Speaking about elephant shooting he says: "I have always felt that, if one may say so, an elephant is too big and too sacred a thing for a puny man to slay. To kill an elephant seems as great an impertinence as to blow up part of the Tower of London. But to stalk him with a camera, oh that is a different pair of shoes—the best sport possible. It implies more crafty stalking, and as great daring and skill as ever."

The Chief says he doesn't mind confessing that he has a weakness for the hippopotamus and would like to have one as a pet. Of course, the hippo isn't beautiful, but he could watch him by the hour and love him. Once a hippo got loose from a Zoo and none of the keepers could coax him back to his cage. A brilliant idea occurred to the manager. He remembered that "Obash"—that was the animal's name,—had a particular dislike for one of the keepers named Scott. So he gave Scott some money and told him to go and make faces at Obash and then to run to the cage and crawl over the back wall. The keeper did as he was told and yelled, "Oh, you Obash! You ugly brute, you." Obash looked up from his meal with surprise and then, seeing who it was, dropped his mouthful of dinner and came after the keeper at a tremendous pace. The keeper ran for dear life through the open door of the cage and scrambled over the back wall just in time. Thus Obash was safely caged once more.

STALKING—He says about stalking that it has always had a tremendous fascination for him, because he had to pit his cunning against the cunning of the thing he was stalking. He loves to creep up on a bird or a rabbit, and "freezing" stock still, so that it doesn't notice him, watch its every move at close quarters. He says, "The moment for the rifle is for me the moment where the stalking ends. You have, it is true, the excitement left of seeing whether you hit or miss and whether your hit kills or only wounds. In either case, to me, the hit always brings regret. I hate to see the beautiful eyes of the creature gently questioning: 'What harm have I done to you that you should shoot me?' And then glazing in death."

SCOUTS' PACE—The Chief often calls attention to the ability of the Zulus to travel long distances, forty or fifty miles a day, by walking and jog-trotting. That was where he got the idea of the Scout's Pace. He tells of one instance where a young Zulu and his wife, apparently with ease covered the same distance in one day as he did, although he was riding on horseback. The distance was forty miles and they appeared to be quite cheerful and not a bit tired at the end of the day.

Lord Baden-Powell claims that he has lived two lives, one when he was a soldier and thinking of war, and the other when sick of war he resolved to do his utmost in the cause of peace. He finished life Number One shortly after he was fifty years of age and had become a Major General, retiring on a pension. In life Number Two he started the Boy Scouts in the fall of 1907. By the term "Scout" he had in mind such men as backwoodsmen, explorers, hunters, seamen, airmen, pioneers and frontiersmen.

THE SCOUT PROMISE—In 1902, a small boy, whose initials were H. V. and who lived in Halifax, wrote a letter which led B.P. to realize that a boy sets some store by his promise, if he makes one.—(I wonder if that man is alive today?)—This is what he wrote: "I will promise to you with all my heart never to touch strong drink or smoke. And you be a brave soldier and so will I". Yours affectionately, H. . . . V, Halifax, N.S." It was this letter that led B.P. to write our little promise to be loyal to God and the King, to help other people at all times and to obey the Scout Law.

OUR GARTERS—Take a look at your Scout garters. They were originally intended, not only to keep the stockings from slipping down, but were made of actual skeins of the same wool as the stockings and were supposed to supply mending material for repairing holes as they occurred.

THE SCOUT BADGE—In the Middle Ages, Charles, King of Naples, owing to his French descent, had the Fleur-de-lys as his crest. It was in his reign that Flavio Gioja, the navigator, made the mariners compass into a practical and reliable instrument. The compass card had the initial letters of North, South, East and West. Now, the Italian word for north was "Tramontana". So he put a capital "T" to mark the north point. But in compliment to the King he made a combination of the letter "T" with the King's fleur-de-lys crest. From that time the north point has been indicated on many maps, charts, and compass cards by that sign. The actual meaning read from this fleur-de-lys is that it points in the right direction, turning neither to right or left, since these lead backwards again. The stars on the two side arms stand for the two eyes of a Wolf Cub, having been opened before he became a Scout, when he gained his Two Star Badge. The three points of the fleur-de-lys remind the Scouts of the three points of the Scout Promise—Duty to God and the King, Helpfulness to other people, and obedience to the Scout Law.

HE IS COMING TO CANADA!

And now, boys, for the best news of all: He is coming to Canada next year with Lady Baden-Powell and their two daughters, Betty and Heather. He is sure to visit your province, that is if nothing happens to prevent his visit, and I know you will want to see him. Of course, he cannot go to every town or even to every city, but perhaps you could arrange to go to see him. Ask your Scoutmaster occasionally if he has heard any further news and when the Chief is expected to be in your Province. If your uniform is worn and soiled, you had better buy another, because you will want to look your best.

Study the contents of this Catalogue. It features your "Official" Uniform and many items of useful equipment. Always bear in mind that your Uniform is not a luxury; it saves wear and tear on your civilian attire and therefore is economy in the end. Above all, it shows the world that you are a member of the World Wide Brotherhood of Scouts.

Might I also urge you to put up all your Service Stars and do what you can to earn a number of badges. A Uniform shirt with no badges at all on it looks rather drab, I think, but with service stars, shoulder knots and a badge or two, it becomes a thing of beauty. Make sure that you have a Scout staff. The Chief is very keen on the staff and claims that he could never have done good Scouting at night without it.

And now, all together—hats on staves—three cheers for the Chief Scout of the world, Lord Baden-Powell of Gilwell!

John A. Stiles

Here is the lightest and most convenient tent made for the hiker. Introduced and made in Canada for the first time from Scotch Sail Silk of a delightful Forest Green Shade. Length 5 feet 6 ins., width 4 feet 6 ins., height 3 feet 6 ins. and a wall of 9 ins. The tent is sold complete with 2 jointed poles and 16 light wooden pegs and the whole is contained in a special carrying bag. The weight complete is only $5\frac{3}{4}$ pounds and when placed into the bag measures about 5 ins. in diameter and 15 ins. long. Can be quite easily carried in a haversack or rucksack.

Price (Complete with poles and pegs)... $9.95

The Scoutmaster Tent

Made specially for the use of Leaders from 8 oz. Army waterproof duck in a Wall style. This is a very serviceable, compact and neat appearing tent and affords ample room for the adult leader. The duck used is of a khaki colour and is specially treated to assure it being water and mildew proof. Length 7 feet 2 ins. Width 5 feet, Height 5 feet and a Wall of 2 feet. Weight without Poles and Pegs 13 pounds. We highly recommend this tent and guarantee it to give many years of service.

Price (Complete with poles and pegs)...$10.75

The Scout "Bell" Tent

This type of tent is still in popular demand. The "Bell" is unequalled for locations exposed to severe wind because of its shape and many guy ropes. It is also an ideal tent for sleeping purposes, having ample room for a full Patrol of Scouts. Strongly made of 10 oz. guaranteed Army Waterproof Duck, well reinforced, and sold with or without poles and pegs as quoted below. Forwarded with shipping charges paid.

8 x 12'	8 oz.	$12.00	$2.50

The Scout "Pyramid" Tent

The "Pyramid" can almost be called a vest pocket tent as it packs into such a small space. It may be suspended from the limb of a tree—from a rope between two trees—or supported by a light inside pole. Made from Sail Silk of excellent wearing quality and supplied with tent bag but no poles or pegs. An ideal hike, bike-hike or canoe trip tent. Forwarded with shipping charges paid.

9 x 9'	Buff Duck	$25.00

The Scout "Wall" Tent

There is no tent more popular with campers than the "Wall" on account of its roominess and stability. It is suitable for many purposes at camp, such as:— Quartermaster's store, First Aid, Lectures on rainy days etc.. As a sleeping tent it has no equal and will accommodate a number of boys or adults. A feature of the "Wall" is the ample head room not found in some other types. Made of guaranteed Waterproof Duck of 8 or 10 oz. as detailed. Forwarded with shipping charges paid.

Size	Wall	Duck	Price	Poles and Pegs

PETER THE CUB by Margaret Beech:—This is a children's book pure and simple, a very jolly and brightly written tale of high-spirited pranks, amusing adventures and happy games. Its cheerful wholesomeness cannot but have its effect upon its young readers. An ideal book for Cubs to read.

Price75¢

PETER and VERONICA by Margaret Beech:—The ideal way for children to learn the laws of fatherhood and motherhood is from the lips of their own mother, but since there are mothers who for one reason or another find it not too easy to impart the information, this book is offered as a help. The best way to use this book would be for mothers to read it aloud, but it can quite well be put into the hands of the children themselves.

Price75¢

POTTED STORIES (To Tell To Scouts and Cubs)—Each of the eighty-seven in this volume is a real Story which was once either told or written in all its absorbing detail and romance. Forty-four of the yarns are quite new, the work of Miss Barclay and other Scouters, and the others will almost all be fresh to Scout readers. There is a chapter on how to re-tell stories.

Price85¢

STORIES TO TELL TO SCOUTS AND GUIDES selected by E. E. Reynolds, the Deputy Camp Chief at Gilwell Park, England:—The Laws are the basis of the work of the Guide and Scout Movements and the right understanding of them is of first importance. No better aid to this can be found than the story, fable and parable, for these help to bring home to the hearers the application in practice of what may seem rather abstract. The purpose of this book is to supply a collection of varied material which may be of help not only to Guide Captains and Scoutmasters, but to all concerned with the training of the young.

Price $1.00

STORIES FOR WOLF CUBS selected by E. E. Reynolds, the Deputy Camp Chief at Gilwell Park, England:—The telling of stories is an essential part of the work of a Cubmaster. "Tell us a story!" is the constant cry, and sometimes it is not easy to find just the right material for the purpose. Here is a book which will meet the need. It contains stories of a varied nature which Cubs will revel in. The book will also be useful for Brownies.

Price $1.00

THE ADVENTURES of a SPY by Lord Baden-Powell:—This book by the Chief Scout adds even a thrill to an age of shocks. It should have been called "Spying as a Tonic." The author frankly rejoices in the dangers he has run and even recommends spying as "the finest recuperation for jaded minds."

Price75¢

THE MYSTERIOUS TRAMP by V. C. Barclay:—Here is an especially interesting book for Wolf Cubs to read. The author is well known to Cubs as the writer of "Danny the Detective" etc. Cubs will find in this publication a story that will hold them spell-bound. Illustrated.

Price75¢

Games and Physical Training

BOOK OF CUB GAMES by V. C. Barclay:—The object of this book is first to please the Cub, and secondly to simplify the work of the Cubmaster. The games are carefully divided upon a system which will make the choice of a suitable game the work of a moment. This book should help Cubmasters to understand their Cubs better and to value more highly the playing of games.

Price75¢

GAMES FOR CAMP and CLUB-ROOM by V. C. Barclay:—Really new games, specially suitable for out-doors, club-room and camp-fire circle. There are some interesting games played with paper and pencil. A collection of sixty games.
