Hiking in Waterton Lakes National Park after the 2017 fire

By Tessa Shelvey, 6th Willowdale Rovers

In June of this year my hiking partner Kirby and I had the opportunity to hike in Waterton Lakes National Park in southern Alberta. This was a very different hiking experience for us as Waterton Lakes had a major forest fire in September 2017 resulting in 70% of the forested area being lost. The fire was caused by a lightning strike. The park had been hit by fires in the past but none were quite the scale of this one. The fire burned 38,000 hectares including 20,000 hectares in Waterton Lakes Park. Over 80% of Waterton's hiking trail network was damaged. The federal government invested $29.9 million to help restore the park. When Kirby and I decided to explore the park in June of this year (2019) we weren't aware of the devastating fire the park was recovering from. Tourism had been at its peak in 2017 at 569,000 visitors. Some local residents said the fire was nature's way of slowing things down because they felt there were too many tourists in the park which were having a negative impact on the environment.

Many of the hiking trails in the park have been permanently closed due to the fire. We decided to hike a 12km trail called the Lakeshore trail which would take us 6km south to the U.S. border of Montana and then we would hike back the same way. The trail was described as fairly easy. We had gotten a late start that day and made our way to the trail head around noon. The trail climbed up to a scenic lookout over Upper Waterton Lake. To our surprise the wildflowers were in full bloom. Passing hikers who lived in the area told us that the park was experiencing an explosion of plant growth underneath the dead trees since the fire occurred two years ago. It was a scene I had never experienced before. All of the trees looked like black matchsticks but underneath the dead trees was a carpet of green interspersed with beautiful spring flowers. It was a unique experience.

The trail turned out to be anything but easy. It was up and down all the way to the U.S. border of Montana. I made the mistake of saying how bug free it was until we got close to the border and the mosquitos came out in full force. We made it to the border and took a few pictures. A large sign indicated that if we chose to go any farther, we would have to call the border control and let them know that we were entering the U.S. As it was very buggy, we decided to head back. Along the way we saw a lot of bear scat on the trail but much to my dismay no actual bears. We finally made it back to our car at 6:30.

The lakeshore trail had been much more challenging than we had thought it would be but the problem of course is that we are comparing the trails in Alberta to the trails in Ontario. A fairly easy trail in Alberta is comparable to a moderate hike in Ontario. To our delight we did see an actual bear on the road the next day when we were driving out of the park.

Waterton Lakes National Park is located in the southwest corner of Alberta, Canada. It borders Glacier National Park in Montana, United States.

Editor's Note: Tessa has a list of animals she wants to see in the wild, thankfully we saw the Black Bear from the safety of our rental vehicle. From the amount of scat, we saw on the trail, that was close enough. Remember your Bear Bell and Spray. In case you're wondering, I'm standing in Canada and Tessa's in the U.S. in the photo above. Hiking from one country to another is now off my bucket list as is cycling from one country to another (completed previously in Europe)

Wapta Falls, Yoho National Park, British Columbia

Wapta Falls is located in Yoho National Park approximately 26 km west of Field, British Columbia and 36 km East of Golden, British Columbia on the southside of the Trans Canada Highway. Careful if you are coming from Field as there is no left-hand turning lane, Parks Canada recommends “Continue 3 km to the park west boundary, turn and come back”.

Yoho and Glacier National Parks share the distinction of being Canada’s second oldest National Parks as they were established on the same day, in 1886, one year after Banff National Park was established in 1885.

It’s considered a short hike at 4.6 km (return), but the walk in from the parking lot doesn’t prepare you for the ferocity of the water fall. The Kicking Horse River roars over the falls here. It is the highest falls on the Kicking Horse River at 30 metres. It made a great lunch stop for Tessa and I after a short stop in Field. 1.5 hours plus anytime you spend having lunch or taking photos.

Don’t stop at the first viewing station. There are three different views of the falls: above (photo above), at and below (photo below) along the trail.

What is amazing is how calm the river is directly below the roaring falls. A great location to have a lunch with a spectacular view. Pull up a log, pass out the sandwiches and relax.

It is important to check the Parks Canada website for park and trail closures. On the day we hiked Wapta Falls the nearby Takakkaw Falls trail was closed. Do your research and don’t be disappointed as snow melts late in some areas in the mountains and then comes early in others and then there are bears on the trails which can also lead to closures.

The Grand River, South-western Ontario

Ever have an item stay on your bucket list longer than it should? For me it's paddling the Grand River. I have a VHS tape done by Channel 12 years ago. Yes, Virginia there really were video tapes prior to DVD's. Always thought it would be a nice summer activity, but it never progressed to an item on my calendar.

Finally, I can take it off my list as Tessa and I, plus friends took the plunge, well not really, we made will swamping the canoe!

We put in in Paris and canoed down river to the Brant Conservation Area. For those planning the trip, I recommend the book: Paddling the Grand River by the Grand River Conservation Authority with Jamie Kent. Its now in its Sixth Edition. It has been "Revised and Updated" so it probably more of an essential guide than my old VHS tape.

The river height is controlled by a number of dams along its length, but I still found it a little shallow for my liking early on from Paris. There are lots of rocks just below the surface. Our canoe received a few more scratches along the way, so I don't recommend cedar strip canoes for this trip. Good communication between the bow and stern is essential at least for your pride's sake (if not for your canoe's health).

While the trip can be done as a day trip, you can overnight at Brant Conservation Area (Brantford), then head out for a second day of canoeing.

Camping can be done from the 1st of May to the 15th of October at the conservation area.

Oh, and one more reason for me to do the Grand River this year, I'll be able to tell Kevin Callan next time I see him at the Outdoor Show, I paddled more than just the lake at my cottage.

The Grand River is a great introduction to Canoeing for those in your Company or Crew with little experience. It will enable them to practice with their canoeing partner. A great outing of the water on a warm day.

Tessa is already planning for next year and has a new route in mind.

In 2020, the world is calling...it's calling YOU!

Scouts Canada members ages 14-18 will be called-upon to ACT alongside up to 10,000 of the world's other WOSM youth! The European Jamboree 2020 organizational team has created a great program filled with opportunities to: 1) "Look Around", and find real, impactful global goals; 2) "Wake Up" and discover one's skills and interact with the greater world around them; and 3) "ACT", and use those skills and identified global goals to make a REAL difference in the REAL world. Of course, the regular jamboree fun and games, cultural discovery, sports, adventure, nature, and friendships are part of the program too!

It's going to be an amazing time and a lot of fun. One of the neat things about this particular jamboree is that a lot of it is "youth led" just like our program here, in Canada. Youth (and Scouters to some degree) can have a lot of input into what you'd like to share about Canada, and Scouts Canada, with other Scouts and Guides from all over the world. We can even request that we ship your favourite Canadian food to Poland so you can share our "Distinctly Canadian" meals or snack foods with everyone else. We'd do this by opening an onsite store, set-up by the youth, and staffed by the ISTs (adult volunteers). How cool is that?

To participate as a Patrol, as an individual youth, or as an adult volunteer, please register at: <https://www.scouterresources.ca/eurojam-registration>

Ranger and Rover (16-21 years)

RaRo

Scouting only in the woods? Vienna is different! Historic or modern, comfortable or sporty, island or Alps – you choose your program and your FLOW.

We are international – be a part of over 2.000 Rangers and Rovers from all over the world.

With the RaRo you will not only find out about the Viennese traditions such as the “Sachatorte” and the unique coffeehouse flair, but also catch Mr. X and experience lots of adventures. From the urban flash mob in the middle of the pulsating metropolis to the action-packed offsite activities in the great outdoors. We create the possibilities – you and your group determine what you ultimately make of it.

Be there and get the maximum FLOW for you, we look forward to seeing you!
